Fall Seminar Series 2011

How to Talk So Kids Will Listen and Listen So Kids Will Talk

This workshop version of the hugely successful book, How to Talk So Kids Will Listen, features instruction and video interaction with the authors, Adele Faber and Elaine Mazlish, as they lead a group of parents through 6 communication skills-development sessions. Originally created by the authors and broadcast as a six—part series for Kentucky Educational Television, each session is based on material found in Faber and Mazlish’s book, with real-life situations dramatized by professional actors. Each session is interactive, with workshop participants learning through discussion & individual & group exercises. The next offering of this workshop will be at:

The Sullivan Center for Children

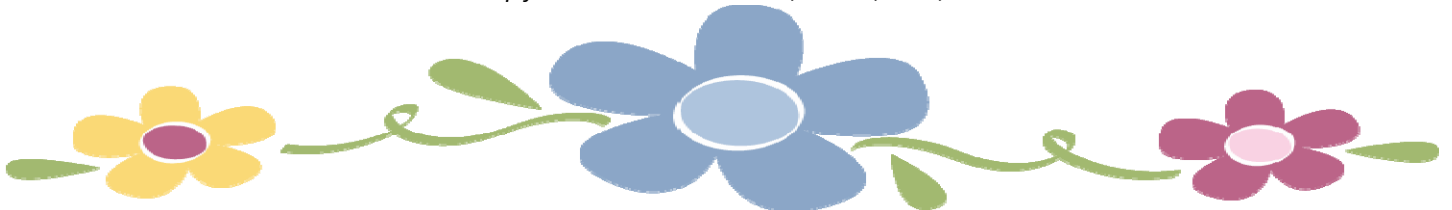

Wednesday Nights 7pm to 9pm

October 5, 12, 19, 26; November 2, 9

The Seminar workshop will be conducted in six 2-hour sessions that will include worksheets, video vignettes and group interaction. The cost will be $25 each session ($40 per couple) and enrollment will be capped at 20 people to facilitate the learning experience.

Complete the registration and send it in early to reserve your spot.

Workshop facilitator: David Wolter, M.Div., M.A., LMFT
